"What! You are sure that you have observed the direction of the rat, or that you saw the movement of the body during the observation?" "The rat!" said Holmes. "Oh, indeed! I had better hurry, as it is only a quarter of an hour." At this I smiled, and took the rose-tree from under the umbrella. He picked it up and looked it over. "You did not see me, then?" "I saw you had seen my man. It was you that had seen my man. I do not recognise any of the oth
