

The Serpentine Road is a narrow one-lane roadway which curves into the woods of Birchmoor at the head of its rending lane. As we turn right-handed upon the other side, we see a house which has been torn into into wards, a smallford-house, and a Shenton Farm, with a driveway on the right side. The house is plainly standing, but there are cracks in the plaster and bad windows, and several small animals fighting about outside. The landlord of the house, Mr. Edward Parr, has told me that he has bur
